GOVERNOR-ELECT WILL RETAIN SEAT IN CONGRESS UNTIL INAUGURATION

Hon. J. K. Tener to Be Sworn In as Pennsylvania's Chief Executive on January 17

MATTHEWS TAKES PLACE

Congressman-Elect Will Not Be Inducted Into Office Until March 4 — District Without Representative

Governor-elect Tener left last evening for Baltimore, Md., where he will look after some business interests until the middle of the week, when he expects to return to Charleroi. When Congress convenes on the first Monday in December Mr. Tener will take his seat as representative for the Twenty fourth district, and as his inauguration as Governor does not take place until January 17, he will probably not resign as Congressman until just previous to his inauguration. As Congressman-elect Charles Matthews will not be sworn in until March 4, the district will be without representation until that time.

In his speeches during the campaign Mr. Tener repeatedly favored a number of internal improvements in State affairs and it is presumed that he will devote considerable of his inaugural address to their advocacy. Among these is an enlargement of the State Railroad Commission's powers so that it can look after trolley companies which in many instances have such an over capitalization that it interferes with the service to the public. To regulate and correct this will be one of Governor Tener's objects.

A complete reorganization of the State Highways Department will probably be another recommendation of Governor Tener, who has long been a student of road building, and who favors a general revision of the law so that more effective work can be accomplished.

He also believes that the State should take charge of the improved highways and maintain them at its expense. Under the present system of local maintenance thousands of dollars worth of roads are annually allowed to go to ruin.

Governor Tener will favor the employment of the best road builder and engineer available. To this man he would commit the work of carrying

NEW SCHEDULE

FOR DIVISION

Superintendent A. G. Mitchell of the Monongahela division, Pennsylvania railroad, has made the announcement that on November 27, there will be a new schedule issued, containing important changes. What the changes will be is a question, but from the satisfactory service now being given, it is hardly likely there will be any radical alterations.

FOOTBALL PLAYER WAS KNOWN HERE

Rudolph Munk, Who Was Killed Saturday, Popular Young Man

BETHANY MAN ARRESTED

Rudolph Munk, the football player of West Virginia University, who was killed in the game Saturday between West Virginia and Bethany college, was known in Charleroi. His home was in Connellsville. A warrant has been issued for player McCoy of the Bethany team, as being responsible for Munk's death. Carroll E. Cummins, assistant bookkeeper at the First National bank here, was a former class-mate of Munks. He says the young man was one of the most popular in school at West Virginia.

EDUCATOR IS CALLED BY DEATH

Dr. Meese of California Dies at McKeesport Hospital

PRINCIPAL AT NORMAL

After suffering for several months, Dr. John D. Meese, 56 years old, one of the best known educators of this part of the State, and for years vice principal and treasurer of the California Normal school, died last evening at 7 o'clock at the Columbia Hospital, McKeesport, where he had been for the past six weeks. The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but it is probable that the body will be taken to Myerdale, where he spent many years of his life. His wife and two children, Hugh P. Meese, of Braddock and Miss Helen Meese a student at the Pratt School of Art in New York, survive.

Dr. Meese was a native of Somerset county. He was appointed manager of the Meyerdale Academy in his early thirties, and held that position until 1892, when he went to California Normal. About ten years ago he was appointed vice principal, which position he held until death. Dr. Meese has not been active in school

GRAND OFFICERS VISIT CHARLEROI COUNCIL TONIGHT

Royal Arcanums Making Arrangements to Entertain Chief Men of Order at Meeting This Evening

Headed by the grand regent, John Gates, a party of grand lodge officers of the Royal Arcanum, will tonight make a visit to Charleroi council No. 1240, and assist in the initiation of a class. Somewhat elaborate arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the guests and a number of brother lodges from Monongahela, Belle Vernon, Monaca, and Brownsville will be present. The Charleroi council is making preparations for the taking of a large class to Pittsburgh on December 2 for initiation. The visit of the grand lodge officers at this time is partly in the interests of his class.

The Charleroi lodge is in a flourishing condition now, having 210 members. Much interest is being taken in the lodge work. Fred Pieper is the regent, Joseph Schoener the secretary and John Fries the treasurer.

ALL RETURNS IN; TENER'S PLURALITY 34,194 VOTES

Official Count Just Completed in Various Counties of State Gives Charleroi Man a Substantial Lead

CHESTER THE LAST COUNTY TO REPORT

Chester county, the last of the sixty-seven to make official return of Tuesdays election, has settled John K. Tener's plurality over Berry's totaling 34,194 votes. His total vote was 411,382, William H. Berry's was 377,188 and Webster's 336.

Chester county gave Berry a plurality of 2,507 over Tener.

Tener's total of 411,382 is 92,202 votes short of the aggregate cast for his two opponents, Berry and Grim, which was 503,845.

Now that the election is over, attention is being generally directed to the inauguration of the Governor-elect.

This will occur on the third Tuesday of January, the 17th, and as soon as the Legislature assembles arrangements for it will be made. The Legislature will meet in the first Tuesday in January, which will be the 3d. The caucus meetings for selection of candidates for presiding officers and for United States Senator will be held the night before.

The inauguration will occur on the same day as the election of United States Senator. George Tener Oliver, the present junior Senator, is a candidate for re-election. Up to this time no avowed opposition has manifested itself.

To Hold Banquet For Men

Methodist Board Issues Invitations for Social Affair

With a view of getting more men interested in church work the official board of the Methodist Episcopal church will on Friday evening of this week give a banquet, for which they have issued invitations. Arrangements have been made to accommodate at least 200 and already a number have signified their acceptance of the invitation.

The official board has secured for the occasion two noted ministers of the Pittsburg conferences to make addresses, Rev J. H. Miller, recently appointed presiding elder, and Rev. Henry N. Cameron, a Washington pastor. The committee in charge of the affair consists of Frank Welsh, E. R. Abell, A. J. Gililand, T. F. Lindsey.

Miss Romola Anderson is a business visitor in Donora today.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Foolworld returned Saturday from a two weeks hunting tour in Armstrong county.

Press Association Holds Meeting at California

THE "LAMBS" ENTERTAIN

Newspaper men to the number of 21 enjoyed the hospitality of H. L. and A. H. Lamb of the California Sentinel at the Normal town Saturday evening at a regular meeting of the Monongahela Valley Press Association. Every paper along the valley from Elizabeth to Brownsville was represented, and after an excellent roast chicken supper with all the "trimmings" at the Hotel Arlington, a brief business session was held in order that the guests might catch the fast train down the river for their respective homes. President R. T. Wiley of the Elizabeth Herald presided and the routine business was transacted. President Wiley was instructed by a vote to appoint two of the members to prepare ten minute papers to read at the meeting which will be held at Monaca next month. The association tendered a vote of thanks to their hosts for the delightful entertainment, and to the proprietor of the Arlington for the excellent service and the many courtesies extended.

Stanley Wycoff, a West Penn employee stationed at West Newton, spent Saturday and Sunday in Charleroi with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Wycoff of Washington avenue.

Miss Elizabeth Eller formerly of Charleroi now of Pittsburgh, was a visitor Sunday afternoon with Miss Wycoff.

Farming in the State

With the average person Pennsylvania is not considered a farming State, yet the agricultural products of this Commonwealth have an annual value that very materially adds to its prosperity. Great as is the mining and iron and steel industries of the State the farming industry is also equally important. Nearly twenty and a half million acres are devoted to farming, and last year on eight million acres were produced ten farm products valued at $159,000,000. These included corn, wheat, hay, oats, potatoes, rye, buckwheat, barley, tobacco and wool.

Ten years ago the census statistics showed a total investment in Pennsylvania in farms, farm buildings, live stock, farming implements and machinery of $1,051,629,173. It is estimated that this has increased at least nine per cent. This would make Pennsylvania's investment show most respectable proportions compared with the investment in some of the other big industries of the State. According to the annual report of the other Secretary of Internal Affairs of the State for 1909 from which these statistics are taken, the present capital invested in all the iron and steel works in the State, including pig iron and tin plate, is but a trifling over $610,000,000, about two-thirds of the amount invested in farming in the State ten years ago and probably about one-third the present farming investment. These are some of the figures that show the importance of farming in Pennsylvania, which is no nearer its fullest development than is the iron and steel or any other of the big industries. The Commonwealth has a farming as well as an industrial future.

A Passing Industry
When the United States court declared the Imperial Window Glass company a violator of the anti-trust law, and fined the officers with a warning to dissolve the corporation the action did not end of an industry as profited from its earliest inception. This is the blowing of window glass by men, or what is known as hand blown window glass. The invention and perfection of machines to do this work has been the hand worker, a final effort has combined and control

duct under one

Use it to cheapen pro-

blown product, the Government dissolves the combination in the interests of competitive production. This throws all the factories back upon their individual resources, and unless the handworkers can accept a heavy reduction in wages they cannot hope to compete with the machine blown product.

The hand window glass blower is in the same position as the English cloth weaver when the power looms first made their appearance in England at the beginning of the nineteenth century. As weaving was one of the leading industries at the time, the invention of the power loom created an industrial revolution. A desperate struggle was maintained by the handworkers to retain their craft and compete with the machine product but the hand workers had to succumb amid great individual suffering. It is the same today with the hand glass blower, not only in window glass but in all other kinds of ware. Machines are constantly being perfected and utilized until the hand blown product is reduced to small proportions to what it would be in the absence of machines. This is but a part of the plan of the evolution of progress and what is lost individually in one direction is gained another. The hard part of it is that individuality does not count in the march of progress.

A Bad Loser

The most disappointed individual in Pennsylvania now is William H. Berry, defeated candidate for Governor. Berry had been telling the people over the State that he was going to win, until he had come to believe it himself, and to be beaten as he was, was a severe blow to his pride. He has been talking contest, but this has been forgotten. He made the statement that if Tener's plurality fell below 12,000 he would endeavor to have a special count made, but seeing it is about three times that number, he has been scared out.

Berry has had little to say concerning the outcome of the election. He has not seen fit to congratulate his successful opponent on his election as the defeated man did in the New York gubernatorial race, but talks of fraud at Philadelphia and grieves because he is not the one to be sworn into office next January.

ELECTRIC SPARKS

The Mail condoles with A. H. Anderson. It's tough even for a good natured fellow to be hustled around as he has been.

"One step won't take you very far, You've got to keep on walking; One word won't tell folks who you are, You've got to keep on talking."

"One inch won't make you very tall, You've got to keep on growing; One little "ad" won't do it all, You've got to keep on going."

The style of women's hats are the same in one respect, at least. They are all outlandish.

TENER WILL RETURN TO CONGRESS

(Continued from First Page.) out a comprehensive system of State-wide highway improvements. The management of the department work would be put under a separate executive head, as the next Governor is of the opinion that one man cannot successfully handle the whole proposition.

At present pieces of road are built in all sections of the State without any fixed plan for connecting them. Governor Tener will advocate a comprehensive system which will have for its purpose the connecting of the county seats. This does not mean the building of a direct route from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia for automobiles.

Increased appropriations for good roads will be advocated. Just how large a sum the Governor will suggest will depend on what will be available after a study of the revenues. In this connection he has in mind the increasing of revenue from some corporate sources which now escape the payment of an amount of taxes in keeping with the valuable privileges they enjoy. This plan also includes the reduction of local taxation to a certain extent.

EDUCATOR IS CALLED BY DEATH

(Continued from First Page.) work for the past three months, having been given a leave of absence. He spent a part of that time at a sanatorium in Mercer county, but failing to recover went to the McKeesport hospital. The body was taken to the home of a brother-in-law, G. W. Daly in Braddock.

Regular sessions are being held at California Normal today, but it is likely that there will be no further school this week until Wednesday or Thursday. A memorial service will likely be held there for him next Sunday.

Dr. Meese at the time of the resignation of Prof. W. D. Wright as superintendent of the Charleroi schools, was favorably talked of as a successor to the superintendent here and was an applicant for the position.

Dr. Johnson's Church.

St. Clement Danes has never forgotten the fact that Johnson worshipped within its walls. The pew in which he sat (it is in the north gallery, close to the pulpit) is marked by a brass plate which was erected by the parishioners in 1851. In December, 1884, the centenary of Dr. Johnson's death was observed by a memorial service, when a special address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Lindsay, at that time rector of St. Clement Danes. Johnson's pew was on that occasion draped in violet. Johnson was always constant in his attendance at church on Good Friday and Easter day. On April 9, 1772, he went with Boswell. "His behavior," writes Boswell, "was, as I had imagined to myself, solemnly devout. I shall never forget the tremulous earnestness with which he pronounced the awful petition in the litany, 'In the hour of death and in the day of judgment, good Lord, deliver us!'"—London News.

Fine Art of Letter Opening.

In Russia one letter in every ten passing through the post is opened by the authorities as a matter of course. Indeed, the postal authorities of every country have experts who have raised letter opening to a fine art. Some kinds of paper can be steamed open without leaving any traces, and this simple operation is finished by reburning the flap with a bone instrument. In the case of a seal a matrix is taken by means of new bread before breaking the wax. When other methods fail the envelope is placed between pieces of wood with edge projecting one-twentieth of an inch. The edge of the envelope is first flattened, then roughened and finally slit open. Later a hair line of strong white gum is applied and the edges united under pressure.—London Chronicle.

Charity and Prudence.

The contradictions of life are many. An observant man remarked recently that he was prowling about a certain city square when he came upon a drinking fountain which bore two conflicting inscriptions.

One, the original inscription on the fountain, was from the Bible. "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Above this hung a placard. "Please do not waste the water."—Youth's Companion.

Not an Unmixed Evil.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the low vantage of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalry will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an uprisable umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason.

They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day in the Life of an English Lady in 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and return at night. That she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's Journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings' trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobart's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

Dr. Johnson's Church.

St. Clement Danes has never forgotten the fact that Johnson worshipped within its walls. The pew in which he sat (it is in the north gallery, close to the pulpit) is marked by a brass plate which was erected by the parishioners in 1851. A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impudently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Lyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brutus, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troy-levant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C. and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburgh. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far."

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred."

Preferences.

OLD FAMILIES.

Some in Europe and in the Orient That Are Really Ancient.

In Great Britain and on the continent those families pride themselves that count their ancestry through ten generations, but their claims to really ancient lineage seem insignificant when compared with those of certain houses in the orient.

We read that the oldest family in Great Britain, the Mar family in Scotland, may trace its pedigree to 1093. Then, too, we have the Campbells of Argyll, whose date is put down at 1190. The Grosvenor family, that of the Duke of Westminster, refers its origin to the same year that the Conqueror "came over"—i. e., 1066. The Austrian house of Hapsburg goes back farther than that, its date being 952, while the Bourbons proudly mention 864 as the date of their origin.

But none of them is to be mentioned in the same breath with the emperor of Japan, whose office has been filled by members of his family for a period of over 2,500 years, the present ruler being the one hundred and twenty-second in the line. The first emperor of Japan sat on the throne about the time when Nebuchadnezzar was flourishing—that is, in 650 B. C.

Another oriental branch, the descendants of Mohammed, presents claims not to be dismissed. The prophet was born in 570, and a list of his descendants has been carefully retained, being duly set forth in a volume kept in Mecca. Little or no doubt exists of the authenticity of the long list of names of Mohammed's descendants as registered in this sacred book.—Harper's Weekly.

WANTED NO FUSS.

Any Old Thing Would Do For Dinner, So She Said.

Mrs. Betsy Baxter was the last person in the world to want anybody to make trouble on her account. When she "dropped in" on Mrs. Doolittle unexpectedly for dinner one day she made her position on this point quite clear. "Don't you go to a mite of bother on my account, Mrs. Doolittle. You know that I'm a person for whom you can just lay down an extra plate and set before me anything you happen to have in the house."

"If you just fry a chicken same as you would for your own folks, an' make up a pan o' your tea biscuits that no one can beat, an' open a glass o' your red currant jelly, an' have a dish o' your quince preserves, an' some o' the pound cake you most always have in your cake jar, you do that, an' have some piping hot apple fritters with hot maple syrup to go with 'em, an' some o' your good coffee, an' any vegetables you happen to have in the house—I like sweet potatoes the way you fix

'em mighty—but, la, just have anything else you happen to have.

"I'm one that expects an' is willing to eat what's set before me, an' no questions asked nor fault found when I go visiting. So don't you put yourself out a mite for me. If you have what I've mentioned an' anything else you want to have I'll be satisfied. I ain't one that cares very much about what I eat anyhow. As the saying is, 'any old thing' will do for me."—Puck.

Recipe For a Flower Garden.

Take twenty square yards of sand and pebbles, stir in sufficient clay to make a compact water-tight mass, ram down hard and score the surface with a rake. Add carefully ten packets of seeds of the most magnificent flower known that will grow anywhere and under any conditions, throwing up a continuous succession of enormous flower trusses from March to November, each petal five inches across and of the richest and most glowing tints.

This is the commonest of all flowers and will be found listed on any page of any florist's catalogue. Set the whole out to rise, keeping it moist and warm. After allowing the mass to rise four months sprinkle red spiders and green aphides plentifully over the top and soak well with tears. The net result may be preserved in a small bottle of alcohol for future reference.—Philadelphia North American.

LOVELY LUCERNE.

The Tourist Center of the "Playground of Europe."

Lucerne, situated in the heart of Switzerland, stands, as it were, enthroned amid the grandest and most picturesque features of Alpine scenery and is, of course, the tourist center par excellence of the "Playground of Europe," three main lines of railway converging on the famous town beside the lake. Nor could nature, indeed, have well done more for "Lovely Lucerne," as all the world acclaims it (declares a writer in London Sketch). On one side stands the Rigi, on the other Pilatus (7,000 feet high), with between them the fair, shimmering expanse of the Lake of the Four Cantons and beyond it again a widespread panorama of the glaciers and snow-peaked ranges of the Alps.

From the Rigi (6,000 feet), easily climbed by aid of its famous "mountain train," the view takes in the Bernina, Gothard, Unterwalden and Bernese Alps, stretching far and wide, from the Senni in the east to the Blumisalp in the west, and to northward the Jura mountains, the Black forest and the Vosges barrier between Frank and Teuton. From the Rigi some fourteen lakes are visible on a clear day, among them Sempach, by the shores of which was fought the famous battle where the Swiss won their freedom.

SLIPS IN WRITING.

Curious Blunders Made by Reporters and Correspondents.

Every once in awhile some schoolteacher comes forward with a list of ludicrous mistakes made in composition by her infant charges. The following laughable "breaks" were not made by school children, but by news paper reporters and correspondents. Writing is their business, but they often make ridiculous mistakes in the haste of "catching an edition."

In a story about a mad dog scare on Staten Island the reporter wrote, "Policeman Jones drove the dog into ambush and killed it."

The head of a prominent Wall street house, in telling about the action of the directors of a certain company, was quoted as saying, "It came like a cannon ball out of a clear sky."

The report of the result of a damage suit: "Carmini Carusini was awarded a verdict of $2,000 for injuries received by the jury from the Erie Railroad company."

This from a Brooklyn reporter: "He tried to end his life by suicide."

This one might have been due to an error in typewriting: "The girl was afflicted with typhoid fever."

A correspondent in a small town on Long Island, evidently laboring under great excitement, wired, "Mrs. George K. Blank was the heroine of the holocaust." (She played a garden hose on a burning barn.) In further describing the blaze he said, "The flames swept into furious environment."—New York World.

How Eggs Are Hatched In China.

There is in China a curious method of hatching eggs. First the eggs are placed in tiers in a large basket, twice the size of an ordinary barrel, which is thickly lined with hay and carefully closed from the air by a tight fitting cover of twisted straw. In three days' time the eggs are taken out and replaced in a different order, those at the surface being put in the lower tier.

This is repeated every third day for a fortnight, when the eggs are removed from the basket and placed on a shelf in another room, being carefully covered with bran. In a day or two the chickens chip the shells and make their appearance into the world.

The success of this method is attributed to the fact that the animal heat of the egg, being retained by the basket, which is formed of material not conducting caloric, is sufficient to support animal life and develop it.—Detroit Free Press.

Force of Association.

"How frigid that girl's manner is!" "No wonder. She is the daughter of a millionaire ice-cream man."—Baltimore American.

New York and the Surf.
Few New Yorkers ever stop to think that one of that city's chief attractions is the surf. Philadelphians must go fifty-six miles to the ocean. Though the folks of Baltimore and Washington live on tidewater, they must travel for surf bathing to the capes. Boston is the only other large town on the Atlantic seaboard besides New York that has the ocean at its back door. San Francisco and Los Angeles are the only Pacific coast cities within trolley ride of ocean beach. None of the Mexican gulf cities can be compared to New York as a seaside resort and as to New Orleans, another Mecca of the pleasure seekers, that lies more than 100 miles above the mouth of the Mississippi. But, including Coney Island and Rockaway, a good many miles of Greater New York are bounded by the ocean. This fact, just to consider the money making side of it, means an enormous revenue to the metropolis from the inland parts of the country. It is an advantage other great world centers, such as London, Paris and Berlin, do not enjoy.—Argonaut.

The Short Step Between.
"I was on an ocean liner when she ran on the rocks off the English coast some years ago," said a traveling man. "And in the panic that ensued there is one incident that stands out in my memory, illustrating the slender thread between the tragic and the ridiculous. We had a fellow on board who had managed to keep pretty well loaded all the way across, and when we struck the rocks he was in his usual condition. When everybody thought for sure we were going to the bottom, he sat down at the piano in the saloon, and what do you suppose he began playing? 'Home Sweet Home.' Somebody went to him and begged him to stop. Immediately he switched off from the doleful strains of the old song to the rollicking melody of 'Down Went McGinty.' The absurdity of the thing seemed to strike everybody at once, and a general laugh followed. The tension was relieved, and there was good order after that."

The Restaurant Piccolo.
Writing from Dresden, an American says: "There is at least one thing in a German restaurant for which one would look in vain in our country. That is the piccolo. You may think that I mean a musical instrument and that any orchestra in any country might have one of these, but you are wrong. My piccolo, the one at the restaurant, is a human being. He is a boy twelve to fifteen years old, who assists the regular waiters. He wears the regulation waiter's costume and looks funny in his spiketail coat. He is as solemn as a funeral, knows how to extract a tip and for the high privilege of retaining his place and taking his first degree as a waiter must endure much abuse at the hands of the head waiter and his underlings. He is a funny little fellow, this piccolo, who because of his appearance could never prosper in our country."—New York Tribune.

Created a New Word.

It was the third Earl Spencer who added a word to the language in consequence of a wager. The bet was that by cutting off the tail part of his overcoat he could bring into fashion overcoats so short that the skirts of the undercoat would show beneath. He won his wager, and "spencer" became the name both of that garment and of the feminine one afterward constructed in its likeness. The peerage has added more than one name to the terminology of costume. Everybody knows "Wellingtons," and the billycock hat is said by some to be really "Billy Coke," from Coke of Norfolk, earl of Leicester. But none of these examples in the sphere of clothes rivals what the Earl of Sandwich did when he contrived the slice of meat between bread as a device to enable him to go on gambling without leaving off for a meal.—London Chronicle.

Getting Acquainted.

"We hesitated about renting this place," said the woman who had just moved in, "until we learned that the families on both sides of us owned their houses. It is so unpleasant to live where the people next door are always changing and you never know what kind of neighbors you are going to have."

"Yes," responded the woman on the other side of the fence. "That's one reason why we're trying to sell our house."—Chicago Tribune.

A Bright Student.

During a recent examination in the theology of the Old Testament the following question was asked a young clergyman: "What language did Balaam's ass speak?" After a moment of thought a smile flashed across his face, and he wrote his answer. I looked at the paper. He had written, "Asayrian."—Lippincott's.

Things He Sees.

"He's a terrible drunkard, isn't he?"

"Yes, but he's a good citizen."

"How can that be?"

"Every time he has Jimjams he goes to the courthouse and pays taxes on a pack of pink and blue dogs."—Cleveland Land Leader.

Anticipated.

Margaret—Did you tell the girls at the tea that secret I confided to you and Josephine? Katherine—No, truly I didn't. Josephine got there first.—Harper's Bazaar.

Knew Better.

"They say Brown is ten years ahead of his time."

"Well, it's not true. He's six months behind. I'm his landlord and know it."

NEWSPAPER MAN'S

FUNERAL ATTENDED BY LARGE NUMBER

William Long Had Numerous Friends Among Fraternity

Governor-elect John K. Tener attended the funeral services of William Long, the well-known newspaper man, at the home of the latter's brother yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at 12 Simms street, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh. Many other prominent men were also in attendance.

Mr. Long's death occurred last Friday after a protracted illness. At the time of his death he was assistant editor of the Washington Pa., Record. For years he had been connected with Pittsburg and McKeesport newspapers.

The Long residence was filled with floral tributes of beautiful design. Conspicuous among them was a matrix of the Records, editorial page, containing the obituary of Mr. Long, gilded in gold and framed in a floral wreath. Adorning the top of the beautiful design was the fatal "80" formed with violets, this being a sign familiar only to newspaper workers.

Services were conducted by Rev. Dr. George T. Street of the Mount Washington Baptist church. Governor-elect Tener was accompanied at the funeral by his secretary, Walter H. Gaither and C. E. Carothers of Washington. The Record's staff and a number of other newspaper men of Pittsburgh and vicinity who had been associated with Mr. Long in journalistic work for many years also were in attendance.

DREAD DANGERS OF WHITE PLAGUE TO BE ILLUSTRATED

Tuberculosis Exhibit and Lectures at Monessen This Week

This week there will be a State tuberculosis exhibit in Monessen which promises to attract no little interest. The affair will be conducted by C. H. Cobough and will be an introduction of the excellent work that has been done by the State board of health with regard to the stamping out of this scourge that for years has been taking so many lives. The Monessen dispensary under the management of Dr. M. J. Cramer assisted by Miss Marie Watson, a nurse, has been doing excellent work.

Many patients have been treated and many have made excellent recoveries. This is only one of the many dispensaries that is scattered over the State doing similar work. The exhibit this week will be held in the Monessen Opera house and illustrated lectures will be held free to the public.

There will be no admission fee charged and the lectures will be interesting and instructive not only to those afflicted with the disease but the public at large.

It will show and illustrate the excellent work that is being done by the State, under the direction of Dr. Dixon.

The Amer Was Thorough.
There were some interesting episodes in the life of Sir Charles Euan-Smith. Once in the market place of an Afghan town he was fired at by a native. He lodged a complaint with the amer, who appeared to take no notice of the incident, merely remarking, "That's all right." Sir Charles complained again and met with the same reply. He still thought that the amer was treating a serious matter with less consideration than it deserved, but thought it advisable to say no more on the subject. About a week afterward he was invited by the amer to ride with him. They rode for some distance outside the town, and they passed gibbet after gibbet. At length Sir Charles said, "Your highness has been busy of late." "Oh, no," replied the amer; "they are your little lot." He had seized all the members of the would-be assassin's family and hanged every one of them.

Tener Will Return to Congress

GOVERNOR-ELECT WILL RETAIN SEAT IN CONGRESS UNTIL INAUGURATION

Hon. J. K. Tener to Be Sworn In as Pennsylvania's Chief Executive on January 17.

MATTHEWS TAKES PLACE

Congressman-Elect Will Not Be Inducted Into Office Until March 4 — District Without Representative

Governor-elect Tener left last evening for Baltimore, Md., where he will look after some business interests until the middle of the week, when he expects to return to Charleroi. When Congress convenes on the first Monday in December Mr. Tener will take his seat as representative for the Twenty-fourth district, and as his inauguration as Governor does not take place until January 17, he will probably not resign as Congressman until just previous to his inauguration. As Congressman-elect Charles Matthews will not be sworn in until March 4, the district will be without representation until that time.

In his speeches during the campaign Mr. Tener repeatedly favored a number of internal improvements in State affairs and it is presumed that he will devote considerable of his inaugural address to their advocacy. Among these is an enlargement of the State Railroad Commission's powers so that it can look after trolley companies which in many instances have such an over capitalization that it interferes with the service to the public. To regulate and correct this will be one of Governor Tener's objects.

A complete reorganization of the State Highways Department will probably be another recommendation of Governor Tener, who has long been a student of road building, and who favors a general revision of the law so that more effective work can be accomplished.

He also believes that the State should take charge of the improved highways and maintain them at its expense. Under the present system of local maintenance thousands of dollars worth of roads are annually allowed to go to ruin.

Governor Tener will favor the employment of the best road builder and engineer available. To this man he would commit the work of carrying

NEW SCHEDULE FOR DIVISION

Superintendent A. G. Mitchell of the Monongahela division, Pennsylvania railroad, has made the announcement that on November 27, there will be a new schedule issued, containing important changes. What the changes will be is a question, but from the satisfactory service now being given, it is hardly likely there will be any radical alterations.

EDUCATOR IS CALLED BY DEATH

Dr. Meese of California Dies at McKeesport Hospital

PRINCIPAL AT NORMAL

After suffering for several months, Dr. John D. Meese, 56 years old, one of the best known educators of this part of the State, and for years vice principal and treasurer of the California Normal school, died last evening at 7 o'clock at the Columbia Hospital, McKeesport, where he had been for the past six weeks. The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but it is probable that the body will be taken to Myerdale, where he spent many years of his life. His wife and two children, Hugh P. Meese, of Braddock and Miss Helen Meese a student at the Pratt School of Art in New York, survive.

Dr. Meese was a native of Somerset county. He was appointed manager of the Meyersdale Academy in his early thirties, and held that position until 1892, when he went to California Normal. About ten years ago he was appointed vice principal, which position he held until death. Dr. Meese has not been active in school

Official Count Just Completed in Various Counties of State Gives Charleroi Man a Substantial Lead

CHESTER THE LAST COUNTY TO REPORT

Chester county, the last of the 67 to make official return of its election, has settled John K. Tener's plurality over Berry's totaling 34,194 votes. His total vote was 411,382, William H. Berry's was 377,188 and Webster Grimes 126,386.

Chester county gave Berry a plurality of 2,507 over Tener.

Tener's total of 411,382 is 92,202 votes short of the aggregate cast for his two opponents, Berry and Grimes, which was 508,845.

Now that the election is over, attention is being generally directed to the inauguration of the Governor-elect.

This will occur on the third Tuesday in January, the 17th, and as soon as the Legislature assembles arrangements for it will be made. The Legislature will meet in the first Tuesday in January, which will be the 3d. The caucus meetings for selection of candidates for presiding officers and for United States Senator will be held the night before.

The inauguration will occur on the same day as the election of United States Senator. George Tener Oliver, the present junior Senator, is a candidate for re-election. Up to this time no avowed opposition has manifested itself.

Press Association Holds Meeting at California

THE "LAMBS" ENTERTAIN

Newspaper men to the number of 21 enjoyed the hospitality of H. L. and A. H. Lamb of the California Sentinel at the Normal town Saturday evening at a regular meeting of the Monongahela Valley Press Association. Every paper along the valley from Elizabeth Brownsville was represented, and after an excellent roast chicken supper with all the "trimmings" at the Hotel Arlington, a brief business session was held in order that the guests might catch the last train down the river for their respective homes. President R. T. Wiley of the Elizabeth Herald presided and the routine business was transacted. President Wiley was instructed by a vote to appoint two of the members to prepare ten minute papers to read at the meeting which will be held at Monessen next month. The association tendered a vote of thanks to their hosts for the delightful entertainment, and to the proprietor of the Arlington for the excellent service and the many courtesies extended.

Many Men Made Idle Indefinitely Along the Valley Through Operations Being Stopped

BLACK DIAMOND CLOSES

Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Co. Suffering by Reason of Low Water in Rivers

Many of the mines along the valley, which ship by rail, have shut down indefinitely because of the close of the lake trade season, and many of the mines which ship by river have closed because of the low stage of water. Saturday the Black Diamond and the Catsburg mines shut down, and about 1,000 men were made idle.

It would be difficult to estimate the number of mines which have for the time being suspended operations, but only the mines which have the benefit of local trade are running steadily, with good prospects. In this latter class comes the Charleroi mine, which ships largely by rail, although it also sends out some coal by water.

The lake trade season lasts from about the first of May until about the last of October, and during that period the mines hereabouts that ship by rail usually have a season of prosperity. Much coal is needed to supply the demand.

In the Pittsburgh harbor, awaiting shipment down the Ohio river at present, is about 2,270,000 bushels of coal. Much of this is the product of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke company, which owns the Black Diamond and the Catsburg mines, as well as many others along the valley. A large part of their shipment is down the Ohio and the low water is seriously hampering their operations. Thousands of men in the valley are idle because of the shutdown of mines.

"A ROYAL SLAVE" AT COYLE TONIGHT

"A Royal Slave" which comes to the Coyle Theatre tonight is to be one of the real events of the theatrical season in the town. Of all the romantic dramas seen last season, few were as well received as Clarence Bennett's beautiful production of the Southland. It is not only unusual in dramatic construction but is magnificent in its scenic investiture, every scene used in the production being carried by the company.

Banquet to Salesmen

H. S. Shanaford, superintendent of Pittsburg district, Armour Packing company, gave a banquet to salesmen of the company at Hotel Lincoln, Pittsburg, Saturday evening. Charleroi men present were J. Fischer, S. D. Hill and Burton Stroud.

Farming in the State

With the average person Pennsylvania is not considered a farming State, yet the agricultural products of this Commonwealth have an annual value that very materially adds to its prosperity. Great as is the mining and iron and steel industries of the State the farming industry is also equally important. Nearly twenty and a half million acres are devoted to farming, and last year on eight million acres were produced ten farm products valued at $159,000,000. These included corn, wheat, hay, oats, potatoes, rye, buckwheat, barley, tobacco and wool.

Ten years ago the census statistics showed a total investment in Pennsylvania in farms, farm buildings, live stock, farming implements and machinery of $1,051,629,173. It is estimated that this has increased at least nine per cent. This would make Pennsylvania's investment show most respectable proportions compared with the investment in some of the other big industries of the State.

According to the annual report of the other Secretary of Internal Affairs of the State for 1909 from which these statistics are taken, the present capital invested in all the iron and steel works in the State, including pig iron and tin plate, is but a trifle over $610,000,000, about two-thirds of the amount invested in farming in the State ten years ago and probably about one-third the present farming investment. These are some of the figures that show the importance of farming in Pennsylvania, which is no nearer its fullest development than is the iron and steel or any other of the big industries. The Commonwealth has a farming as well as an industrial future.

A Passing Industry

When the United States court declared the Imperial Window Glass company a violator of the anti-trust law, and fined the officers with a warning to dissolve the corporation, it marked the end of an industry as practiced from its earliest inception. This is the blowing of window glass by men, or what is known as hand blown window glass. The invention and perfection of machines to do this work has been blown product, the Government dissolves the combination in the interests of competitive production. This throws all the factories back upon their individual resources, and unless the handworkers can accept a heavy reduction in wages they cannot hope to compete with the machine blown product.

The hand window glass blower is in the same position as the English cloth weaver when the power looms first made their appearance in England at the beginning of the nineteenth century. As weaving was one of the leading industries at the time, the invention of the power loom created an industrial revolution. A desperate struggle was maintained by the handworkers to retain their craft and compete with the machine product but the hand workers had to succumb amid great individual suffering. It is the same today with the hand glass blower, not only in window glass but in all other kinds of ware. Machines are constantly being perfected and utilized until the hand blown product is reduced to small proportions to what it would be in the absence of machines. This is but a part of the plan of the evolution of progress and what is lost individually in one direction is gained another. The hard part of it is that individuality does not count in the march of progress.

A Bad Loser

The most disappointed individual in Pennsylvania now is William H. Berry, defeated candidate for Governor. Berry had been telling the people over the State that he was going to win, until he had come to believe it himself, and to be beaten as he was, was a severe blow to his pride. He has been talking contest, but this has been forgotten. He made the statement that if Tener's plurality fell below 12,000 he would endeavor to have a special count made, but seeing it is about three times that number, he has been scared out.

Berry has had little to say concerning the outcome of the election. He has not seen fit to congratulate his successful opponent on his election as the defeated man did in the New York gubernatorial race, but talks of fraud at Philadelphia and grieves because he is not the one to be sworn into office next January.

TENER WILL RE-TURN TO CONGRESS

out a comprehensive system of State-wide highway improvements. The management of the department work would be put under a separate executive head, as the next Governor is of the opinion that one man cannot successfully handle the whole proposition.

At present pieces of road are built in all sections of the State without any fixed plan for connecting them. Governor Tener will advocate a comprehensive system which will have for its purpose the connecting of the county seats. This does not mean the building of a direct route from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia for automobiles. Increased appropriations for good roads will be advocated. Just how large a sum the Governor will suggest will depend on what will be available after a study of the revenues. In this connection he has in mind the increasing of revenue from some corporate sources which now escape the payment of an amount of taxes in keeping with the valuable privileges they enjoy. This plan also includes the reduction of local taxation to a certain extent.

work for the past three months, having been given a leave of absence. He spent a part of that time at a sanatorium in Mercer county, but failing to recover went to the McKeesport hospital. The body was taken to the home of a brother in-law, G. W. Daly in Braddock.

Regular sessions are being held at California Normal today, but it is likely that there will be no further school this week until Wednesday or Thursday. A memorial service will likely be held there for him next Sunday.

Dr. Johnson's Church.

St. Clement Danes has never forgotten the fact that Johnson worshipped within its walls. The pew in which he sat (it is in the north gallery, close to the pulpit) is marked by a brass plate which was erected by the parishioners in 1851. In December, 1851, the centenary of Dr. Johnson's death was observed by a memorial service, when a special address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Lindsay, at that time rector of St. Clement Danes. Johnson's pew was on that occasion draped in violet. Johnson was always constant in his attendance at church on Good Friday and Easter day. On April 9, 1773, he went with Boswell. "His behavior," writes Boswell, "was, as I had imagined to myself, solemnly devout. I shall never forget the tremulous earnestness with which he pronounced the awful petition in the litany. In the hour of death and in the day of judgment, good Lord, deliver us!"—London News.

Fine Art of Letter Opening.

In Russia one letter in every ten passing through the post is opened by the authorities as a matter of course. Indeed, the postal authorities of every country have experts who have raised letter opening to a fine art. Some kinds of paper can be steamed open without leaving any traces, and this simple operation is finished by reburning the flap with a bone instrument.

In the case of a seal a matrix is taken by means of new bread before breaking the wax. When other methods fail the envelope is placed between pieces of wood with edge projecting one-twentieth of an inch. The edge of the envelope is first flattened, then roughened and finally slit open. Later a hair line of strong white gum is applied and the edges united under pressure.—London Chronicle.

Charity and Prudence.

The contradictions of life are many. An observant man remarked recently that he was prowling about a certain city square when he came upon a drinking fountain which bore two conflicting inscriptions.

One, the original inscription on the fountain, was from the Bible, "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Above this hung a placard, "Please do not waste the water."—Youth's Companion.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the low vales of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein to one hand and an uprisen umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason.

They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, innocents—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of Porto Rican, to render fare, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day in the Life of an English Lady in 1791.

As for industrial idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then climbed over the benches and went to Hastings' trial in the ball, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobart's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impudently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Lyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brutus, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troy-rovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story. If for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburgh. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far."

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside abouts preferred."

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lyinx," said the first tea. "I'm fond of golf."
